

UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY

The basic goal of United States International University is to develop human excellence—not simply intellectual excellence. From the beginning, the University has emphasized those areas where people work with people, where ideals and high purposes can raise the level of living, and where man's search for meaning is central.

The undergraduate program is in the traditional liberal arts concept, presenting carefully selected courses considered to be essential to each of the academic disciplines. Graduate study is deliberately limited to the humanistic areas—those areas of the liberal arts and social sciences, business, education and law, which deal with the affairs of men, the minds of men, and the relationship which they have to one another.

United States International University integrates the qualities of the small liberal arts college with the strength and richness of a major university. It presently has seven campuses, four in this country and three abroad. The multi-campus, international concept has shaped the development of the University since its earliest days, with the dual objective of offering the intimacy and personalized education of a small campus and preparing students for responsible citizenship in an ever-shrinking world.

The California Western Campus occupies 140 acres of wooded land overlooking the Pacific Ocean, on Point Loma in, San Diego. It has the advantage of a quiet, natural setting of seclusion and beauty, yet is but a 15-minute drive from the center of the city. Like the other two San Diego Campuses, it has Los Angeles to the north, Mexico to the south, the mountains and desert to the east and the ocean to the west, and affords the many educational, cultural and recreational opportunities to be found only in a cosmopolitan area. On it are located the California Western College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Law.

The Center for the Performing Arts, in downtown San Diego, houses the School of Performing Arts, which offers sound general education along with intensive professional training in theatre, dance and music. It also houses the Central Administration offices. The Elliott Campus, which opened in the fall of 1968 on 410 acres of wooded land just within the northern boundary of the city, is the location of the Elliott College of Arts and Sciences, the Graduate School of Leadership and Human Behavior, the Graduate School of Business Administration and the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. It is 20 minutes to the center of the city and 15 minutes to the beaches and cultural attractions of La Jolla.

The Colorado Alpine Campus, in Steamboat Springs, Colo., offers regular liberal courses and is also the site of the University's Intensive Study Program. Its rugged, mountainous setting is in the heart of one of the most popular winter and summer recreational areas in the United States.

U. S. International University in England, the first of USIU's "university centers abroad," provides a rich and diverse academic program for American students, and a program
